McNett Clement Dies From Attack of Pneumonia at Addison Home

Born in Naples in 1861—Married in Early Life to Miss Grace McCaig of Rathbone—Former Erie Ticket Agent in Addison — Funeral to be Held Friday Afternoon.

McNett Clement, prominent Addison insurance man, died Tuesday morning at his home on Steuben street, following a brief illness of pneumonia. Mr. Clement had been about the village on Saturday, but became ill later in the day. Pneumonia set in and his condition grew gradually worse.

Mr. Clement was born in Naples, November 2, 1861, a son of William H. and Eliza A. Riddell Clement. He was married in early life to Miss Grace McCaig of Rathbone who died in December, 1933, and most of his business life was passed in this community. He was Erie ticket agent here for about fourteen years and was later engaged in the grocery business in Addison and in Canisteo. Upon the death of the late Wesley Bartlett, he returned to Addison from Canisteo and purchased the insurance business which had been conducted by Mr. Bartlett for many years.

Mr. Clement was for several years a deacon of the First Presbyterian Church of Addison. He was a past master of Addison Union Lodge, No. 118, F. & A. M. and was a member of Addison Royal Arch Masons. Genial in spirit, honest and reliable, "Mac" as he was familiarly known to his intimates whose numbers were legion among the business people and citizens of Addison, was a popular and highly-respected figure in the community.

Surviving are; two sisters, Mrs. Harriett Straight of Naples, and Mrs. Belle C. Goodrich of Naples; two nephews, Merton C. Wood of Geneva and Dana C. Goodrich of Albany; and five nieces, Mrs. Nelson Fox and Mrs. Ward Jones of Naples, Mrs. Herbert Carpenter of Canandaigua, Mrs. A. J. Ladd of North Syracuse and Mrs. Glenn Rousenbauer of Webster. Another sister, Mrs. M. N. Wood of Naples died only about ten days ago.

The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at one o'clock at the Presbyterian church, the Rev. John V. Axtell officiating. Burial will be in Rose Ridge Cemetery at Naples.

Herds of Deer Feeding Daily on Cameron Hillsides

Steuben County people unable to roam the Adirondacks or Pennsylvania regions for a sight of the graceful deer have been able to gratify themselves with such a vision this week. For on the hillsides between Cameron and Adrian large herds of the picturesque animals have taken openly to the fields every afternoon.

The deer have been driven from cover by the pangs of hunger since the heavy snows have blanketed all their natural food to a depth of four feet. So out they come towards evening each day to seek dried grass on wind-swept hillsides, giving the public a spectacular view from the highway. The writer of this story counted 40 bucks and does and one fawn Sunday afternoon in three herds, while others report even larger numbers. One Addison man stated he counted 54 head, while a railroad man claims to have seen seventy while passing westward over the Erie one day last week. At one point the deer have been feeding on a haystack under cover of night.

It is a thrilling sight to observe large herds of deer feeding on Steuben hillsides, especially in view of the fact a couple of decades ago hardly a single animal was to be found in the county.

Dr. Stiker Hears Discoverer Discuss New Desensitizing Solution

Dr. Hartman, Columbia Professor, Whose Innovation Promises to Relieve Pain, Addresses Buffalo Dental Alumni—"Not a Cure-all", He Avers—Solution is Useful in Preparation of Cavities for Filling, He Says.

Dr. Amos G. Stiker of Addison was among the group of Western New York dentists who assembled at the Statler Hotel, Buffalo, to hear Dr. Leroy Hartman, professor of dentistry of Columbia University, discuss his newly-discovered desensitizing solution to relieve dental pain. Dr. Hartman spoke before a meeting of the University of Buffalo School of Dentistry Alumni Association.

"I make no claim for the solution as a cure-all" emphasized the Columbia instructor whose discovery has been receiving nation-wide publicity and he went on to say "I don't consider it a panacea for all dental ailments. It will not take the place of novocain or analgesia. But it will point the way toward better desensitization of the sensitive dentine."

The dentine is that part of the tooth between the enamel and the pulp. Dr. Hartman explained that the solution is useful only in the preparation of cavities for fillings. He did no boasting. He quoted other dentists and explained the outcome of his own experiments.

"This is my humble contribution to humanity," he declared. "I hope it will be a means of relieving much unnecessary suffering."

Dr. Hartman pointed out that the solution will not act through enamel. A knife-edge stone should be used to cut through the enamel to the dentine, he said. Emphasis also was placed on the fact that the area of application is desensitized, not an area of several teeth. He also explained that where phenol or gold or silver salts have touched the dentine, the exposed layer should be cut off before the solution is applied.

Addison Ag Students Attend Cornell Event

Forty members of the Department of Agriculture of Addison High School attended the Farm and Home Week at Cornell University on Lincoln's Birthday. The students were transported by Clayton Herrington and by Frank Finnerty, instructor in agriculture at the high school.

The local attendance was the largest of any school in the state. All the pupils except those of the Agriculture II class returned Wednesday night. The latter class, consisting of eight boys, remained in Ithaca for the judging events Thursday and Friday and also to attend the outstanding lectures.

The events which were judged were: plant diseases, Paul Richtmeyer, Harold Wellman; milk, Lynn Straight; poultry and shop, Harold Arwine; livestock and potatoes, James Walker, Harry Stuart; apples, Curtis Miller, Herbert Allison. Results from the judging contest have not been obtained to date.

While at the university the class called on Wilford Hurd, a member of the local department last year and the first student of the Addison High School in recent years to take a four year course in agriculture at Cornell. The trip to the university is an annual event on the schedule of the local agricultural department. The gathering at Cornell takes the form of the mid-winter meeting of the Future Farm organization of New York State. Approximately seven hundred boys were in attendance.

Several members of the local agricultural department have signified their intentions of attending the College of Agriculture at Cornell when they are graduated from the local department.

Judge Pratt Tells Ad Club Men Real Estate Bears Too Heavy Share of Taxation Burden

Steuben Surrogate Gives Stirring Talk at Wednesday Luncheon—States Land Makes up Only Third of Wealth of New York Yet Bears 80 Per Cent of Tax Burden—Advocates Shifting Load.

George Pratt, Surrogate of Steuben County, gave the Addison Ad Club men an enlightening talk yesterday on tax reduction on real estate. Judge Pratt is chairman of a volunteer committee working to secure relief for the owner of real estate from the top-heavy load this type of property now is bearing.

Judge Pratt prefaced his remarks by stating there are already nine states which have put in operation plans to transfer part of the tax burden from real estate to other classes of property. "We started out", the speaker said in part, "to try to see if it were possible to find some method to relieve the long suffering real estate owner. We wish to limit the tax on real estate to two per cent. The need for lightening the burden on real estate is apparent when you consider the large proportion of government cost it bears.

"The total wealth in New York is approximately 75 billion dollars of which real estate of the state makes up 28 billions, or roughly speaking one-third. Yet this one-third of the wealth of the state bears 73 per cent of the direct tax, and considering the indirect taxes it is safe to assume real estate bears fully 80 per cent of the total tax. In other words one-third of the property of the state bears 80 per cent of the taxes, and real estate only earns 10 per cent of the total income of the state.

"In Steuben County, which is typical of rural sections of the state, there are hundreds of parcels of property sold for taxes each year. Some few of these are redeemed or pass to new owners, but a substantial part remain in the hands of the county. This condition has been going on steadily so that less and less property is left and taking these parcels off the tax rolls gradually is reducing the tax base. Yet the real estate in private hands must continue to pay the increasing cost of government, so the burden gets steadily heavier.

"Now I am not in favor of reducing tax on real estate at the expense of our public school system—I shall always have children in the public schools as long as I have children of school age to send—nor am I in favor of cutting the salaries of teachers or the efficiency of our schools in any respect. But I do believe the load of taxation should be more equitably shared by other classes of wealth.

"The Mastick Commission says there is no other source of taxation to replace what we would take off real estate. As a matter of fact the commission's own report suggests sources for more then 200 million of new revenue—and we only need to transfer 160 millions off real estate."

The members tendered Judge Pratt a vote of thanks, according him hearty applause at the conclusion of his enlightening address.

There were 37 members and guests

Edward Auringer Tells of Panama

Members of the Senior Class of Addison High School heard a most interesting talk Friday by Edward Auringer, a sophomore at the school, who recently enjoyed a trip to Panama in company with his father, Dr. H. E. Auringer.

In an informal discussion, Edward told of many memorable sights and experiences and showed snapshots taken at many points on the journey. Among the points of interest covered were public buildings, schools, special schools for negroes, markets, open air vegetable and fruit shops, animals, vegetation, the climate, the people, their language, food, dress and customs.

The talk was of special interest to the seniors, most of whom are students of American history and are thus in a special position to appreciate the opportunity of getting first hand information of neighboring peoples on the American continent.

Valentine Party Given By Eastern Star

An enjoyable Valentine party was given by members of the Eastern Star, following the regular session of lodge, Saturday evening. Mrs. La Rue Symonds worthy matron, presided during the meeting.

Games and entertainment in keeping with the occasion were arranged by Mrs. Winnie Wade and Mrs. Raymond Andrews, after which refreshments were served by Miss Winnie Miller and Mrs. Homer Morton.

Miss Madeline Davis of Jasper visited Mrs. Frank Dart, Wednesday evening.

Promises

Since Dr. Townsend of California launched his $200 a month pension scheme to benefit and retire from active service Americans over sixty, there have been almost as many substitute plans as there are days in the year. Some would not go as far as the venerable medico, while others seem to think his idea is only a "piker" plan compared with what should be done for the oldsters.

The New York Times printed the following plan, which in turn the publishers had taken from another paper:

Retire-at-Birth Plan

If ridicule will serve to restore the reasoning powers of many Townsend Club members who are at heart patriotic citizens, the satire substitute gravely offered by Jay Lutz and three other Battle Creek (Mich.) citizens can hardly be bettered.

Mr. Lutz and his co-authors, in a letter to the Enquirer and News of their city, solemnly proposed the foundation of "The Retire-at-Birth Plan", the RABP. Here are its provisions:

Every new-born child in the United States would receive from the government a promissory note for $20,000, at three per cent interest payable in 20 years. The three [illegible] $50 monthly, would go to the [illegible] until the child was 20. Each year during these 20, the government would pay $1,000 into a sinking fund for the retirement of the note, and when the child reached the age of 20, the government would give him or her the $20,000 it had paid into the sinking fund.

Boys and girls of 20 who elected to marry would thus have a capital of $40,000, and work would be forever unnecessary if they would undertake to have at least four children. Because they would receive $50 a month for each child until it reached the age of 20, and there would be enough left of their own $40,000 after that to care for them in their own old age.

The authors of the RABP urge these advantages over the Townsend old-age revolving-pension plan: People of all ages would be for it, nobody would ever have to work again; it would cost only $1,600 a year per person instead of $2,400 annually, the per capita cost of the Townsend plan; and it would automatically end the agitation for birth control.

According to the Elmira Star-Gazette one Charles Whoosis has thought up a retirement plan which not only puts the Townsendites to shame for simplicity, but even makes the maker of the RABP plan green with envy. We quote this plan verbatim, and leave it to the readers to decide which of these two they will now endorse. Of course some may string along with Dr. Townsend and a few might remain in the McGroarty camp, meager though its canvas does look compared to some of these more promising promises.

Here it is and don't blame the editor if it does not hold everything you could wish for:

Because it would require its beneficiaries to earn their "social honorarium"—and set no restriction on the amount thereof—the Sky's the Limit Plan was advanced today by Charles Whoosis after several months intensive research.

Whoosis says the plan, which he calls the STL, is superior to both the Townsend Old Age and Retirement-at-Birth plans because it wouldn't give anybody anything; but rather would provide an opportunity for all to fulfill their financial destiny through light, pleasant tasks.

The STL Plan is simplicity itself. Here's how it works.

Twenty-one the Turning Point

Upon reaching the age of 21, every citizen of the United States would receive from the government:

One printing press.

A supply of bank note paper.

Dies of $1, $5, $10, $50 and $100 denominations.

A keg or two of green ink.

Several skeins of silk thread, assorted colors.

An instruction book.

Then, right in the home, without fuss or feathers, the people could print all the money they needed to enable them to achieve Social Security.

For practical purposes, a minimum of $10,000 a month would be set. This would insure a minimum annual income of $120,000. If a person can't get along on that, he doesn't deserve to get along at all.

Teeth in STL

If a person failed to print $10,000 in new currency in any given month, he'd receive a stiff warning. After three warnings the equipment would be repossessed.

Ambition would be rewarded. After printing his monthly $10,000, a person could knock off a few extra thousands for rainy day purposes.

Thus the STL would:

1. Relieve the government of the task of printing currency.
2. Encourage industry in the home.
3. Supply people with all the money they wanted and thus make the United States a nation of financially independent citizens.
4. Balance national, state, municipal and personal budgets.
5. End the depression.
6. End all competing plans to end the depression.

Facts Save Money

A taxpayer of Corning has recently been advocating the publishing of itemized statements of all town and county expenses in all the papers printed in Steuben County. His assertion is based upon the common-sense principle that public officials would be more watchful of the Public's dollar, if the public could lay its finger positively upon the place each dollar goes.

This fact is as true as the fact that people have liberty when the country in which they live has a censored press. Public officials have always advanced the same reason when they abandoned the once almost universal practice of publishing itemized audits of their handling of tax money—the plea of saving the expense of publication notices. But if the truth were known by the rank and file of those who pay the bills they would insist upon knowing the entire story of what and where their money went. The real way to save money is by making public the expenditure of every cent spent, for many an official though scrupulously honest, would hesitate to authorize expenditures of doubtful value if he knew every voter would have the facts presented in his newspaper.

The American Heritage

"We have become a great nation because we are a nation of fearless individualists. We have no caste, no privileged few; and the little child born in the tenements is a potential president of the United States. This is our heritage. No depression can take away from the true American his desire to achieve. The history of Ameriea is filled with the stories of men who battled their way through barren wilderness, who blasted their way through mountains of rock, and laid the foundations of cities and businesses that stand as testimonials to this country and its opportunities. For the track walker becomes the railroad president, and the farm boy becomes the president of a great bank." From an address by Roy H. Faulkner.

"It is for us, the living, to be dedicated to the safeguarding of the Ark of our Covenant, that from the honored fathers of our nation we take increased devotion to the form of government they with their inspired vision and political genius so splendidly designed; that we highly resolve steadfastly to refuse to barter our inheritances as citizens of sovereign commonwealths, or suffer our states to be levelled and obliterated under the power and weight of swollen centralized authority; that this Federal Union shall have a new consecration and that government of the people, by the people and for the people, under powers reserved to them, in their separate states, shall not perish from the earth"—Arkansas Gazette.

Where the Taxes Come From

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

"Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors."

Congress, as this is written, is beginning to remember that profound truth—and to realize that the public remembers it, too.

Therein lies a headache—not only for Congress but for all other officers of government, whether national, state or local, who have spent the people's money at such amazing speed during recent years.

The trouble is that in proportion to public expenditures, there are fewer earnings for the tax-collectors to levy on than there were, let's say, a decade ago.

Recently-published figures have brought this fact dramatically to the taxpayer's attention. They show, for example, that whereas in 1929, taxes took one-eighth of the national income (which means the earnings of all the people), by 1932, they took one-sixth, and by 1935 more than one-fifth.

Or put it another way! In 1928, the average American labored one day out of every eight to pay the costs of national, state and local government; in 1932 he labored one day out of every six for the same purpose, and in 1935, one day (and a few hours over) out of every five.

Yet even that didn't meet the whole cost. If government last year had paid all its bills in cash, nearly one-third of all the money earned by the American people would have been required to balance the account. Instead, government borrowed, which means that the bill must be paid out of future earnings of the workers or their children—still in the sweat of the man who labors.

Today the politicians are searching feverishly for a method of producing taxes without the inevitable sweat. They find it a difficult job. Perhaps they are approaching it at the wrong end. If they want to make things easier for the people, who ultimately pay the bills, why not turn their thoughts to the problem of spending fewer billions, rather than to the question of how to collect more?

A Cornell bulletin gives hints on how to control weights, both for those who want to gain and those who want to lose. Single copies of this bulletin, E-239, may be had from the office of publication in Roberts Hall, Ithaca, N. Y.

The National Patrimony

By WALTER LIPPMANN

NOW that the emergency farm measures have come to an end, there will be many who wonder whether, except as a sop to the farm vote, it is necessary to do anything further. It is only by facing that question squarely that one can hope to make head or tail out of the complicated discussion now taking place.

If we examine the physical basis of the national life of the seven great powers of the world, a very striking contrast appears at once. For each square mile of land fit for the cultivation of crops there are in the United States about 100 persons. In France there are nearly 300. In Italy there are nearly 500. In Great Britain and in Germany there are nearly 600. In Japan there are over 2,400. Only Russia, with sixty-six persons a square mile of arable land, is less crowded and Russia is relatively a backward country. In the possession of raw materials the position is roughly the same. Now a nation which has a large population in relation to its physical resources can maintain a high standard of life only if it can obtain from other countries a supply of food and raw materials. It must obtain them by buying them. It can buy them only if it can earn money selling its exports.

If it is to live, it must assure itself markets in which it can sell exports in order to obtain the funds to pay for its necessary imports. For nations with an inadequate physical basis, foreign trade is not just a method of obtaining additional profits. It is an absolute necessity. This is the situation in which Britain, Germany, Italy and Japan find themselves. It is not a comfortable situation.

The United States has an infinitely stronger basis for its existence than they. It has in relation to its land resources a small population, and it is this fundamental fact, together with the two oceans, which gives America its unique security, its unchallenged independence, and its unrivaled opportunity to maintain free institutions.

But though the American patrimony is a great one, it can be wasted and destroyed. There are many lands on the face of the earth that were once fertile and are now desert or are so poor that only a small population can live on them. There are many lands, too, where the farming population has been drawn into factories and where the art of farming has been lost. The United States has not yet arrived at this dangerous situation. But it has plainly reached the turning point in its national history where the process of decay has begun. The decay consists in the impoverishment of the soil through destructive farm practices and the impoverishment of the farm population by an excessive industralization. The end of the process comes when the land is no longer fertile enough to support the people and the farmers have left their farms because they can not make a good living.

By keeping these elemental considerations in mind it is possible to understand a point which must puzzle many persons at the present time. How is it that the farm leaders who yesterday were worrying about surplus crops are now worrying about the capacity of the land to produce crops? It would be easy to be cynical and say that they wish to pay a subsidy to farmers and if they cannot pay them for not producing wheat and cotton and corn they wish to pay them for producing hay and legumes. But that cynicism would miss the point which is fundamental in this whole business, a point which has been in the minds of all the serious students of the question though it became practical politics only when the Supreme Court did them the great service of ending the emergency program.

The point is that the kind of farming which produces the big surpluses is such bad farming that in the long run it will destroy the soil and bring about deficits. Dr. H. H. Bennett, the director of the Soil Conservation Service, an expert of indisputable authority, has reported that 100,000,000 acres of formerly cultivated land have already been totally destroyed, that another 125,000,000 acres have "lost all or the greater part of the top soil," and that on another 100,000,000 acres the process of erosion is already under way.

This is the destruction of the basic capital resources of the nation. The main cause of its is that the land is being exhausted by planting crops that exhaust the land. These are the crops of which there has been a surplus. In other words, we have produced too much wheat, cotton and corn not because the land is too fertile but because we have been robbing it. These surpluses have meant in agriculture what a failure to renew and repair the machinery would mean in a factory. Now the reason why the farmers have been exploiting the land instead of husbanding it is in part due to inadequate knowledge but it is chiefly due to the fact that they could not afford to farm properly. They have been like a factory manager who can not afford to plow back into the business enough to keep it efficient. The wasted lands of America are like machines worked without lubricants and repairs until they break down entirely and have to be scrapped. Thus, for the long run and in its fundamental aspects, the farm problem is the reverse of what it was supposed to be during the emergency. It is not a problem of overproduction due to unmanageable fertility but of overproduction which destroys fertility. And the overproduction which causes low prices is itself aggravated by low prices. In their desire to increase their income the farmers have produced more of the very crops that destroy the price of those crops and the fertility of the land as well.

Fear of Inflation Is Spurring Scramble for Ways to Offset It

By MARK SULLIVAN

IN California the trustees of Stanford University have asked the local court to give them latitude to invest some of the university's funds in common stocks or land, if at any future time the trustees should think it wise to do so. In Illinois a county judge gave to trustees of an individual estate the same discretion. In both cases the action was based on the possibility that at some time in the future inflation might arise.

These steps are typical of actions which are being taken everywhere by men experienced in the management of large funds. The steps are being taken or considered by trustees of colleges, libraries, hospitals and the like; by directors of trust companies and insurance companies and by private individuals. In some cases the step requires sanctions by the courts, in others not.

If persons experienced in handling large funds think it prudent to be prepared to act in the event of inflation, the information on which they proceed should be made available to average men, who would be equally affected by inflation, but who have less understanding of what it is or how to offset it.

Roughly, there are two principal forms of investment. One is mortgages and bonds, which are in most cases the same thing as mortgages. The other is shares of stock in corporations, together with land. Of the two, mortgages and bonds have for more than fifty years been considered the safest. In the fundamental sense they are still the safest and will continue to be. A man or institution owning a sound bond or mortgage for $1,000 due at some future date will get the thousand dollars. He will get the interest regularly. So will the owner of every life insurance policy.

The present apprehension arises out of fear that each dollar may some time come to have a smaller purchasing power. The apprehension is that what is now a dollar, as respects purchasing power, may become only 50 cents or some such amount. The apprehension is that what can now be bought with a dollar may at some future time cost $2 or more. The trustees of Stanford, for example, who pay one of their teachers, let us say, $5,000 a year, fear the time may come when they will have to pay the teacher $10,000 a year in order to have him live as well as he now lives.

To what extent is the apprehension of inflation justified? The principal cause of inflation, if it comes, will be excessive government expenditure. It will be excess of what the government pays out above what it takes in. This excess, or deficit, is paid with borrowed money. Each dollar thus borrowed by the government has the effect of taking a tiny fraction off the purchasing power of all other dollars in the pockets of individuals, in the pay envelopes of workers, in the treasuries of life insurance companies or elsewhere. Government borrowing under present conditions is somewhat like watering the milk.

The question is, how long will the Administration go on paying out more money than it takes in and borrowing to pay the deficit? Under certain conditions the government could go on for a considerable time without necessarily causing serious inflation.

What is causing the financially experienced to have their present apprehension is that the deficits and the borrowing to pay the deficits, instead of becoming smaller, are actually increasing. Indications are that the deficit next year may be larger than in any previous year. This condition, coming four years after the low point of the depression and three years after the present Administration came in with an announced purpose of ending all deficits, causes concern. New and additional expenditures, causing new and additional borrowing, are arising. They include part of the payment of bonus to veterans and part of the billion dollars which will have been paid out to farmers during the year ending next June 30.

Nevertheless, inflation is not an immediate probability. What is happening now is merely apprehension of a menace, apprehension of an inflation which, if it comes at all, would not take effect for a year or more.

There are some forces working against serious inflation. President Roosevelt will try to prevent it. He is putting a limit to the future activities of some New Deal spending institutions. There are in Congress two bills which aim at direct inflation, that is, inflation by means of printing additional quantities of currency. These bills, in spite of agitation about them, probably will not pass. If they do, Mr. Roosevelt will veto them; and the support of them in Congress is not large enough to pass them over the President's veto.

The present psychology of inflation will be interrupted during the Presidential campaign. There will be occasions when it will be felt that the Republicans will win, and that the Republicans, if they win, will at once proceed to end the deficits and the borrowing. Probably much the same thing would happen if Mr. Roosevelt wins. Freed of the political temptation to refrain from reducing expenditures on the eve of an election, the Democrats, if elected, might next January proceed earnestly toward reducing the expenditures. Whichever party wins will levy large increases in taxation. The taxes, as they come into the Treasury, will reduce the borrowing.

Interior Beauty of 1936 Electrolux Matches Charm of its Cabinet Design

Surprising beauty in the interior design of the 1936 Electrolux gas refrigerator which matches the charm and loveliness of the cabinet is the outstanding new feature of this year's models according to Wilfred M. Miller, manager of Addison Gas & Power Co., who announces the display of the new line in the company's local store.

The 1936 Electrolux is now not only as beautiful on the inside as it is on the outside, but to these elements of loveliness many new conveniences have been added, thus bringing the product absolutely up-to-date both from the standpoint of fine appearance and of greater usefulness, Mr. Miller stated.

"Many months of study by Servel engineers aided by artists to see what improvement could be made over the 1935 model which women all over the country called the 'best looking refrigerator of them all' have resulted in the creation of a product that represents the last word in automatic refrigeration", said Mr. Miller.

"With a reputation of having designed a cabinet excelling all others in beauty, and with a background of superiority in performance because Electrolux is operated with a tiny flame of gas, the company concentrated on efforts to make the interior of the refrigerator harmonize with its exterior. Silence, freedom from repairs and economy of operation are still the features that make Electrolux outstanding among refrigerators.

The success of Servel engineers and artists has been such that our women customers will be surprised and delighted to see how much beauty can be given to the interior of the 1936 models. One of the striking differences between this year's refrigerator and that of last year is that of the shelving.

"Asc the door opens, one is at once impressed with what the Electrolux artists call a 'rhythmic banding of the shelf ribbons' which replace the old-fashioned, plain-looking grill-like shelving usually seen in refrigerators.

"This new shelving, consisting of alternate chromium strips and open spaces, some wide and some small, worked out with an artistic effect, give the impression of streams of bright silky ribbons running toward the back of the refrigerator.

The shelves themselves have been so arranged that they give the interior a harmonious appearance not only without interfering with the usefulness of the shelves, but on the contrary giving more storage space and affording more ease in the placing of food in the refrigerator. The new arrangement also affords a more complete circulation of air throughout the interior. The shelving has also been designed to take better care of bottles so that they will not topple over.

"All-in-all, the whole interior is as trim and efficient as a battleship stripped for action, and yet there is plenty of sparkle, sharp contrast and that soft lustre which is just what the modern housewife wants in a refrigerator.

"Another innovation in interior decoration of the 1936 Electrolux is the ebony-like black Bakelite handles which blend in with the satin and polished chromium finish of the drawers and with the gleaming white porcelain finish of the whole interior.

"The cover of the vegetable freshener has an automatic-controlled metal lid that keeps its contents tightly covered without any attention. The vegetable freshener is simply pulled in and out and the lid lifts and falls into place.

"The equipment of the 1936 model comprises all the things that aided in making marketing so successful in 1935, namely, the flat usable top, durable door gaskets, controlled defrosting, trigger tray release, flexible rubber grid, split shelves, adjustable top shelves, bottle and fruit baskets, interior lighting and thorough insulation along with the new improvements. Nothing that affords real convenience has been omitted, but all useless, dirt trapping gadgets have been left out.

"By viewing the models in our showrooms, housewives will appreciate the full extent to which the manufacturers have realized the desire to furnish a refrigerator which conforms to the modern trend of making the kitchen not merely a place in which to prepare meals, but a room that will have as much attractiveness as any other part of the home rather than a scene of drudgery.

"Not the least important of the advantages of owning the silent, economically-operated Electrolux is the backing of the local gas company."

State Legislature in Turmoil Over Governor's Anti-Crime Bills

Albany — Bi-partisan legislative opposition to a number of the anti-crime bills sponsored by Governor Lehman has resulted in the engendering of the most intense bitterness against the State's Chief Executive which Albany has witnessed in many years. Members of both parties have been loud in their denunciation of the action of the Governor in issuing a statement declaring that anti-crime bills were killed in both houses because of "the influence of powerful groups" and adding that "there are forces which apparently are much more interested in keeping crime safe for the criminal than in protecting law-abiding citizens."

The Governor's statement drew terrific cross-fire from every Republican member of the Assembly, many GOP members of the Senate and a great many Democratic members of the Legislature, headed by Senator John J. McNaboe, Professor of Law in Fordham University, because, as they alleged, "Mr. Lehman's remarks were unjust; constituted contempt for the Senate and Assembly; were thoroughly unwarranted by the facts, and represented the cheapest kind of politics as well as the zenith in vicious utterances". In fact, Senator McNaboe told his indignant colleagues on the floor of the Senate that "the Governor had put himself on the threshold of impeachment."

Over on the Assembly side, Speaker Ives challenged the Governor to name "powerful groups who had exerted sway over the votes on the anti-crime bills of any member of the Assembly"; Brig.-Gen. John S. Thompson, GOP Assemblyman from Orleans County, pointed to his service in the National Guard for the past 35 years and his service in suppressing the Auburn prison riots in 1929, demanding to know if he was included among those the Governor declared "accepted the dictation of the underworld"; Assemblyman Horace M. Stone denounced the Governor's attack upon those voting against the crime bills as "contemptible" and as "a damnable lie", and Assemblyman Harry Reoux, with eyes flashing and fists clinched lashed at the Governor's statement joining with Speaker Ives in urging a retraction or apology."

Monday night the war against the Governor's "ill-advised statements" blazed anew when Assemblyman W. Allan Newell of St. Lawrence County, introduced a privileged resolution, again calling upon the governor to "name the forces who had controlled votes on the anti-crime bills" and to "name the Assemblymen who had been so controlled." Denunciation of the Governor waxed fast and furious, with many of the Democrats either openly or privately agreeing that the Governor's comments "had been a mistake".

The Facts

Without any desire whatever to editorialize herein, but rather based on statements by legislators, unbiased observers, such as newspaper men and those who have actually carefully analyzed all the anti-crime bills, a number of them represent thoroughly bad legislation striking, as they do, at some of the fundamental constitutional rights of citizens of the United States. For example, one of the bills abolishes the presumption of innocence of all persons riding in an automobile in which an unlicensed revolver is found. Another bill permits a Judge and District Attorney to comment on evidence offered, and compels a witness to take the stand against himself. This, in the opinion of many thinking persons, does not represent orderly jurisprudence, but is rather reminiscent of the trials of prisoners in the days of the Spanish Inquisition.

Now, as a matter of further fact, a considerable number of the anti-crime bills were passed by the Republican-controlled Assembly and, despite statements emanating from the Governor's office to the contrary, only the most glaringly bad bills went down to defeat. In addition, it was the Republican-controlled Assembly Codes Committee, headed by Assemblyman James R. Robinson of Tompkins County, that reported ou the anti-crime bills in the first place, and this action was in graphic contrast to the policy of last year's Democratic-controlled Codes Committee which killed the Bennett anti-crime bills in Committee. The Governor, it will be recalled, failed to raise his voice in support of these bills last year.

How long the war between the Governor and the Legislature will last, is not know at this writing. It is blazing brightly this week, and will probably continue to burn fiercely in that, in the opinion of political observers, the Governor and his advisors are frantically searching for a campaign issue for November—an issue which will serve to overshadow the New Deal's influence and control over the Democratic administration in this state. But, as Speaker Ives put it last week, "Government by epithet has come to Albany".

Motor Users Threaten Reprisals

Hearings on the emergency gasoline taxes, held by the Assembly Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment, headed by Assemblyman Ralph Gamble (Rep) of Westchester, were featured by threats of aroused motor users that, if the emergency gas taxes were not repealed, in whole or in part, automobile and truck organizations would launch a state-wide-door-to-door campaign against those responsible, starting with Governor Lehman as probable head of the Democratic ticket in the state next fall. To eliminate either one or two cents of the emergency gasoline taxes will require drastic slashes in the budget on which Assemblyman Abbot Low Means Committee, is now working. Moffat, Chairman of the Ways and The Legislature is also deeply interested in what Senator Joseph Clark Baldwin, (Rep) of Manhattan, will have to say about the budget, the dapper New Yorker having done a great job in recommending budget cuts while he was Minority Leader of the Board of Aldermen in New York City.

Eaton to Seek District Delegate Post

Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton is expected to advise Republican State Committeemen attending Tuesday's meeting of the Republican State Committee, to be held in New York, that in order to relieve the pressure on the State Committee of those desiring to attend the National Republican Convention in Cleveland, he will seek election as a district delegate to the convention instead of going as a delegate-at-large. The unprecedented action of Chairman Eaton is sure to make a distinct hit in Republican circles throughout the state in that State Chairmen have always held the inalienable right to attend national conventions at delegates-at-large. There being only eight delegates-at-large posts this year, Chairman Eaton decided upon this course of action as a gesture of courtesy to the State Committee and prominent Republicans statewide. He will run in the primary as a candidate for delegate from the 34th Congressional District, Assemblyman Frank G. Sherman, Otsego County Chairman, stepping aside and running as an alternate. John G. Clark, Broome County Chairman, will be the other organization candidate for delegate from the 34th Congressional District.

"Gin-Wedding" Bill

Designed to minimize the number of hasty marriages in the state, Assemblyman Jane H. Todd, (Rep) of Westchester, is fighting hard to pass her bill providing for an elapsed time of 72 hours between the issuance of a marriage license and the performance of a wedding ceremony. "Gin weddings, marriages entered into for the sake of headlines, 'adventure' or merely for the purpose of 'surprising friends' and adding to the conversational output of the world should be discouraged", said Miss Todd "and my bill will help to do that". Also during the week Miss Todd's bill providing for jury service for women passed the Assembly with only one dissenting voice raised against it. It awaits passage in the Senate.

Wilbur F. Knapp

Bath, February 18 —Seasoned political observers in the county seat believe that Wilbur F. Knapp, prominent Bath attorney, will doubtless be a candidate for District Attorney in the Republican primaries next Fall. It is well known that, in response to suggestions from many leading Republicans in various parts of the county, Mr. Knapp has the matter under consideration, but has to date made no definite announcements of his candidacy.

SENATOR THOMAS C. DESMOND

In addition to legislation for possible improvement in county and township government, he has introduced a program for highway safety, including bills for footpaths along highways and regulation of signs and billboards.

Senator Desmond is anxious to obtain criticisms and suggestions regarding these bills from interested readers throughout the state. He offers to send copies free to anyone who will write to him care of the Senate Chamber, Albany.

"Liberal Use of Advertising Can Change Automobile Habits of Nation" Says Chevrolet Executive

That the automobile habits of a nation can be changed, and that the liberal and aggressive use of newspaper advertising is one effective way of changing them, is evident from the experience of the Chevrolet Motor Company, according to W. E. Holler, its vice president and general sales manager, who cited an array of sales records dating back to the new car announcement November 2, 1935, by way of proving his point.

Although Mr. Holler's comment was occasioned by the recent used car selling achievement of Chevrolet dealers, it applies with equal force, he said, to their new car activities. The early announcement of new models, coupled with wide use of advertising pointing to the advantages of early purchase, resulted in the case of Chevrolet in a complete upset of the old order—a complete reversal of the industry's experience in the past, when November and December were two of the quietest months of the entire year.

"The Chevrolet Motor Company", said Mr. Holler, "had every reason to believe that economic conditions being favorable, the public stands as ready to buy in the fall as it does in the spring.

"In preparing for its early announcement, Chevrolet banked on its ability, by means of advertising and showings, to convince the buying public of the benefits it would derive by buying new cars in November and December. As we pointed out, the early buyer insures against cold-weather driving troubles, by obtaining a mechanical unit that is new throughout. Further, such an investment is sound from the economic standpoint, for the car bought in the winter remains a current model longer than the car purchased in the spring.

"That these considerations, and availability of new models for Christmas gifts, appealed strongly to the public is plain from the sales figures. November's retail sales of new units were 91,959, and December's were 80,327. This combined with a high October figure to produce a fourth-quarter total of 207,-140 units—the greatest in this history of Chevrolet.

"However, the sharp gains in new car and truck sales are only a part of the story. The public's altered buying habits are also apparent in the used car end of the business, where a large part of Chevrolet's advertising expenditure was focused in the past three months.

"This advertisnig was designed to impress the potential buyer with the fact that he could benefit himself by buying a used car immediately, from his Chevrolet dealer. The statement was true. The country-wide response to the new Chevrolet was bringing into dealers' used car stocks a great many fine late models, and all it required to change the buyer's habits was the realization that his own best interests would be served by earlier purchasing.

"Vigorous advertising was brought to bear upon the situation. One series of large advertisements was prepared in such a way that the Chevrolet dealers in the city where it ran could insert news of individual cars in their used car stocks. Strong emphasis was land on the Guaranteed OK Tag plan which enables the purchaser to buy with confidence from his Chevrolet dealer. The result of all this concentration on earlier buying was a record that has rarely been equalled, regardless of the season."

Further unusual measures, adopted January 1, will unquestionably assure new sales records this month and next, Mr. Holler said. They include the creation of a million-dollar fund, to be used in retiring from the highways used cars which are unsafe, and in providing extra compensation for salesmen who do an outstanding used car selling job. The Chevrolet Motor Company is paying the dealer for every unworthy old car taken in trade and junked, and is also cooperating with dealers in providing cash incentives for salesmen.

"Thousands of cars whose further operation would constitute a hazard to their owners and the public have been scrapped by Chevrolet dealers. Besides having a wholesome effect on the automotive merchandising situation, the plan is tying in with present-day safety efforts. For while it is generally recognized that the driver, and not the car, is the largest single factor in traffic safety, the vehicle is also a factor, and any program which retires ancient cars from use cannot fail to help the situation."

Flood Control Council Warns Against Groundless Rumors

Binghamton, N. Y.—Realizing the danger of unfounded rumors relative to flood control recommendations to be made by the Army Engineers in Central-Southern New York, the Flood Control Council of Central-Southern New York, at a meeting here February 8, adopted a resolution urging discouragement of such speculation pending actual report of the Engineers.

Michael H. Cahill of Corning, President of the Council, has been authorized to appoint a committee of engineers from municipalities of the flood area to hear any objections to the Army Engineers' report after it is made public.

The Council resolution follows:

"Because Flood Control is a comparatively new thing, and because it is not entirely understood by a great many persons, it seems reasonable to expect that as a result of the Engineers' survey in various parts of this area, unfounded rumors and reports as to the location and nature of Federal flood control structures may be circulated, and be given some credence by persons who are not in a position to obtain verification or correction of such rumors.

"Nobody will be in a position to say as to where any of these structures will be located or what their nature will be until the report of the Army Engineers is made to the Chief of Engineers with the approval of the Army Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors. Nor will there be any definite information as to the nature of these structures, except that it is the general information of this Council that most of the dams will be dry dams.

"Behind the Army Engineers are twenty years of experience in flood control projects. It is the belief of this Council that the people of this area may safely rely upon the good judgment of the Army Engineers and it is the urgent request of this Council that rumors of any sort be discouraged pending the actual report of the Engineers, which will be fully publicized.

"The objective of this Council is to obtain the greatest amount of insurance possible against the repitition of such disaster as that which swept these valleys in July, 1935. It is the opinion of the council that no person, no group, would now or at any other time care to assume responsibility for any condition resulting in the delay or failure of such a project involving such essential question of public safety and economic well being.

"What About Tomorrow?"

Let Majority Rule on Wars

Secretary of Peace in Cabinet Again Urged by Gannett

A call upon America "to forever renounce war of aggression" was sounded by Frank E. Gannett in a talk at Cornell's 29th annual Farm and Home Week.

"I believe America should never resort to war without a majority vote of the people", he said. "We should, of course, take the profit out of war, out of all wars, and in case of war we should draft capital as well as men."

The surest way for the country to keep out of war is "to do everything possible to prevent the beginning of a war anywhere on earth between any nations", he pointed out.

"I hate war with all my soul. I hate war pictures; I hate martial music; I hate to see cannon in public places; I hate everything that suggests the world war."

As in previous addresses, he again raised the question why there should not be a Secretary of Peace in the President's cabinet. "We have a Secretary of War, a Secretary of the Navy — why not a Secretary of Peace?" he asked. We spend billions in preparation for war, but we spend practically nothing in efforts to avert war.

"When we get down to the root of the matter", he continued, "we find that all wars are economic struggles. The economic situation in Italy, Germany and Japan menace the peace of the world. If we are to avert war everywhere on earth, therefore, we must promote stable economic conditions so all peoples may have the food and the things they need."

Prices Collapsed

Since a collapse in prices caused the depression and this collapse was caused by the increasing demand for gold throughout the world, said Mr. Gannett, we wisely but tardily followed the example of thirty-three other nations and went off the gold standard and raised the price of gold.

"This step arrested the fall in prices and finally brought back a raise in prices, affecting particularly farmers and the producers of basic commodities. We made the mistake of not raising the price of gold high enough to reduce the dollar to its former purchasing power. We failed to go as far as many other nations and thus checked our recovery."

Reporting on conditions as he observed them at first hand in Europe, Mr. Gannett concluded " the depressing conditions in the rest of the world should be a challenge to America. We should put our own house in order. We need only to establish a sound monetary system for exchanging goods and services to give us consuming power that will tax our productive capacity. Then there would be more jobs than men and every family would have enough income to enjoy the highest standard of living ever known."

Reinhardt Orders Machine Invented To Make Cobwebs

The Warner Bros. studio technical staff invented a machine that spins cobwebs for "A Midsummer Night's Ddeam," booked for the Fox Theatre on Tues. By the simple expedient of pointing it at the spot where cobwebs are needed—and presto, there's the web.

The apparatus consists of a fan with a small reservoir attached to its main shaft. The reservoir is filled with a rubber compound. As the fan shaft revolves, centrifugal force carries the rubber through the edges of the two part reservair and a filmy thread of rubber attaches itself in cobweb shape, wherever it is blown by the fan. In studio parlance, the machine is called an „Akron Spider."

There is an all star cast which includes James Cagney, Joe E. Brown, Dick Powell, Jean Muir, Victor Jory, Verree Teasdale, Anita Louise, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Mickey Rooney and scores of others. The screen play is by Charles Kenyon and Mary McCall, Jr., and the costumes by Max Ree.

Says Birds Repay Damage to Crops

They Ttone by Destroying Insects and Weeds, Farm Visitors Hear

The damage that starlings, crows and sparrows do to farm crops in New York State should be looked upon as a salary for ridding the fields of insects and weeds, Paul Kellogg of the department of ornithology informed a Farm and Home Weed audience at Ithaca.

These so-called destructive birds should be considered as a standing army which must be paid in fruits and vegetables while they wait to make war on the insect world, he said. Just as taxes are paid to support a standing army, so the feathered warriors are supported until the insect enemy puts in an appearance.

Not only do birds help the farmer to rid his fields of thousands of insects every day, he pointed out, but they also eat a large number of weed seeds in the winter time. The tree sparrow alone eats tons of weed seeds each winter. If one species of birds eats such an amount, the speaker observed, the combined efforts of all the birds must more than repay the farmer for the crops lost as a result of birds.

If insects were given no interference and were left to breed, the earth would be covered with them in five years, Mr. Kelloww stated. Crops would be destroyed, homes overrun and disease would prevail. Nature has given birds as a check on the insect.

More than $200 worth of prizes will be awarded the show winners, with the first prize awards in each class of $7.50. An exhibit consists of nine potatoes and there will be classes for Green Mountain and Smooth Rural varieties. All growers of the county are eligible, there is no entry fee and the exhibits, according to Clerk Art Wagner of Cohocton are to be placed by noon Tuesday.

State and national leaders of the potato industry are included in the convention program. There is Henry Marquart, former president of the Vegetable Growers Association of America, and now president of the New York State Vegetable Growers Association. As secretary of the Niagara Frontier Market at Buffalo, Mr. Marquart is well qualified to discuss the subject of Regional Markets.

Other Prominent Speakers

Evans, Georgetown, secretary of the New York State Certified Seed Potato Growers Association, Spencer Duncan, Albany, in charge of the potato grading service, and Carl Wellington, Arkport, chairman of the marketing committee of the Empire State Potato Club, will take part in this discussion.

The marketing of New York State potatoes will be graphically illustrated in the exhibit of the Department of Agriculture and Markets. Samples of new varieties and strains of potatoes from the test grown last year on the farm of Leo Briggs of Arkport, will be exhibited.

An invitation is extended to all potato growers to attend and participate in this meeting, which will be in session each day from 10:30 to 3:00 o'clock, in the auditorium of the Cohocton Union School.

That the general welfare of the American people is bound up with the preservation of their national patrimony is, it seems to me, indisputable. That the reinvestment of 500 million dollars a year in the preservation of the land is a prudent form of national saving seems to me to be no less clear. All that remains to be determined is how the undertaking can be arrranged so as to conform to the Federal character of the government and how it can be most wisely and efficiently administered. The underlying principle cannot, I believe, be challenged.

What can be said is that a program to conserve the soil is only one-half of a program to meet the farm problem. The other half lies in the field of what may be called forced over-industrialization. The real evil of the excessive tariff is not so much that it destroys the markets for farm products—they may be tending to diminish anyway—but that by maintaining artificially high prices for industrial goods it diverts to the protected industries a larger proportion of the capital and labor of the country than would go to them under a more freely competitive regime. This diversion is aggravated by the growth of monopolies, many of which depend upon the tariff. The result is to raise the price not merely of the goods the farmer buys at the village store and thus to reduce his real income, though it does that, but also to raise his costs of production, the cost of the money he borrows, his freight rates, his taxes.

We shall continue to have a farm problem if we continue to maintain the tariff at its present exorbitant level and if we continue to foster the growth of monopoly. Unfortunately there are no signs that either party is prepared to consider this aspect of the problem.

Bradford Bronchos Yield To Jasper High Five, 25 to 20

Rough Riders Seem Assured of Pennant in County Loop as Second Victory of Week Carries Them to Triumph Over Campbell—Jasper Junior Varsity Too Strong for Campbell Seconds, 26-8—Willover is Scoring Star.

The Rough Riders of Jasper High proved themselves to be of championship caliber when they tamed the Bronchos from Bradford 25 to 20 on the home court Friday night. Going into the game with the knowledge that the winner would probably be county champion, both teams battled furiously.

With beautiful coordination the Jasper team swept all before them for the first few minutes, scoring six points and holding Bradford scoreless. Sleve broke the ice for Bradford with a stevie and the local boys made it up on Murphy's one-handed shot. The quarter ended 8 to 2.

Paced by Waight, the Rough Riders rode rough for the second period and dunked in eleven points, holding Bradford to two, a sucker shot by Stewart. Waight broke loose for four double deckers during the period.

Bradford came out in the approved do or die style in the third period and Stewart sunk three stevies in as many minutes to throw a scare into the local fans. Bednar dropped another before Lewis converted a free try. This was Jasper's only score of the period. Sleve scored a goal and Williams added a free throw to wind up the quarter.

The Maroon team came back hard in the final period and took the ball for most of the time although each team scored five points. Waight led the scoring with ten points. Stewart was right behind him with eight counters.

The Bradford Girls' team had considerable difficulty in wresting a 16-11 decision from the local lassies in the opener. The game developed into a duel between Jacobwicz of Bradford and Irene Preston of Jasper with the former carrying off the honors with fourteen points. Miss Preston scored eleven, being the only member on her team to hit the hoop.

Following through on the momentum of their last week's victory over Bradford, the Rough Riders romped over Campbell on the local court Monday to the tune of 34-11. After spotting Campbell a lone point on a free throw, the Maroon got into action and wound up the first period with a 6 to 3 lead.

The second period was one of despair for the few Campbell fans that accompanied their team. The Rough Riders donned their spurs and rode roughly over the court, emerging from the quarter with fourteen points added to their credit and having held Campbell scoreless.

The opening moments of the third period was almost an replica of the second. Campbell scored a foul shot and then was engulfed in a Maroon wave that scored seven points in three minutes. Coach Beacom called a halt to the proceedings and sent the entire second string into the fray. Campbell picked up some speed but the quarter ended 28 to 6.

Campbell acquired five more points during the early moments of the final period at the expense of the seconds. Then the first string went back in and drilled through for eight points in the final two minutes of play.

Willover was the outstanding star of the game with nineteen points, only one of which was scored from the free throw line. Campbell scored three out of seven foul shots. Jasper dropped three out of eight tries.

The J.V's. smothered the Campbell rookies 26 to 8 in the opener. After taking a 10 to 2 lead in the opening period, the locals held their opponents scoreless in the second period and added four more points. A third team took the floor in the second half and stayed for the remainder of the game, running the score to the final 26-8.

This victory put Jasper in the lead in the county loop, although they must defeat Campbell once more to assure themselves of the pennant. Campbell and Bradford have more games yet to play than the local boys and a tie might be produced although there seems but little possibility.

Harmed By Freezing?

Mrs. W. C., writes: "I intend to leave my home closed a short time this winter, but I am afraid the cellar where my canned goods are stored will go below freezing.

"Will freezing injure what I have canned in syrup and my canned corn and peas?"

Mrs. Grace Laubengayer of the state college of home economics answers: "Since the canned goods may possibly freeze, I sugguest that you cover your fruit shelf with several thicknesses of newspaper, stand the canned goods on the paper, and then cover them with more newspaper to try to prevent them from freezing.

"If your goods are sealed perfectly at the start, and the seal is not broken by expansion during freezing, the canned goods will not spoil. If freezing takes place, the products lose their firmness, caused both by freezing and later thawing. The wisest plan is to prevent the freeze."

Need Attention?

H. C., asks: "Will my strawberry bed, which will fruit this spring, need much attention before harvest?"

Professor M. B. Hoffman of the pomology department replies: "It will not need any great amount of attention. Most of the mulch where used for winter protection should be removed from about the plants to the spaces between the rows. Do this about the time growth starts.

"If only a thin layer of mulch is allowed to remain over the plants, they will grow through. This provides an excellent place for the berries to rest and protects them from dirt and grit. Experiments have shown no particular advantage in fertilizing the strawberry bed in the spring of the fruiting year."

Academy Team Continues League Domination By Downing Addison Knights on Local Floor

Blue and White Machine Rolls Up 64 Points to 10 for Local Five—Ray Hargrave Returns to Battle Line and Puts Up Great Fight Against McMillan—Team Play of Knights is Weak—Orr Looks Good—Frosh Lose to C. F. A. Varsity Seconds.

Led by the towering McMillan, who rang up a total of twenty-nine points, the Corning Free Academy team continued its victory sweep by toppling the Addison Knights on the local floor Friday night 64 to 10. The Hillsters have yet to meet defeat in Steuben County circuit competition and those in the know are freely predicting that they will continue through to complete an unblemished season.

From the Addison standpoint, the game was marked by the return to the wars of Ray Hargrave, center of the 1934-35 combination, who has been out of competition during the present season to date. Ray gave the brilliant McMillan the hardest tussle of the year and accounted for all the points scored by the Knights. The rangy pivot man played well at all times, but he was plainly not in the best of condition and had to be relieved by Hopper in each half.

Larry Gardner was outstanding on defense for Coach Hewson's charges, He throttled Benyo completely and also carried out his offensive assignments well. Joe Dominick, usually the spark-plug of the Knights, was decidedly off-color, his play being erratic and lacking in usual pep. Johnny Orr, recruit guard, showed to good advantage As soon as the promising sophomore learns to relax and to discard some of his tension, he will make trouble for the best of opposition. The team play of the Knights was very erratic, their weak passing allowed many interceptions which permitted the rangy McMillan to score before the defense could get set.

For the Academy, McMillan was outstanding on offense, but hardly lived up to his reputation on defense. Shaddock at guard turned in a stellar performance, both offensively and defensively.

In the preliminary, the Addison Frosh collided with C F A varsity Seconds, with honors going to the Blue and White Reserves, 45 to 9.

Outweighed twenty to thirty pounds to the man, the Freshies turned in a very creditable performance. They were originally booked to oppose the CFA Freshmen, instead of the varsity seconds, but the billing was changed by the Corning management with the explanation that they could not afford the expense of bringing their Freshmen five to Addison. Be that as it may, the record shows that the Addison management found means of transporting its Freshmen team to Corning to oppose the Academy Frosh as a preliminary to the first CFA-Addison engagement. The record further shows that the outcome of this All-frosh encounter resulted in a victory for the Addison rookies.

This Week's Thought

The "kingdom" was Jesus' word for the total maximum of possibility for good which can be accomplished in us and through us and around about us, in so far as we make right adaptation to God.
—Dr. Henry Nelson Weiman.

Solomon Rickner, pronounced unfit for service in the Civil War, celebrated his 115th birthday, the unchallenged oldest man in Nebraska, Born in Pennsylvania he was rejected by the army because of a "bad leg".

Grace Moore Returning in Grand Musical Film

Millions sigh . . . dream . . . live anew as Grace Moore, with all the glory of her God-given voice, brings new hours of thrilling entertainment! The divine star of "One Night of Love" returns to the Avon Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday with a matinee Sunday, in her newest and greatest triumph Columbia's "Love Me Forever".

To a waiting world there can be no more heart-warming news! No news so rich in its promise of soul-filling romance, ear-lilting melodies! "Love Me Forever"—drama, romance, and music brilliantly blended in a grand story—is a gift to the whole world!

A girl — from the lap of luxury! A man — up from the gutter! Thrown together—torn apart! It's stirring drama as Grace Moore and Leo Carrillo battle against the fates.

Also in "Love Me Forever" are Michael Bartlett, Robert Allen and others. Victor Schertzinger directed.

Ken Maynard Dean of Western Rope Artists

Ken Maynard is one fellow who can't be roped in.

For the Columbia star of western dramas knows every roping trick there is and the way to get out of them.

Maynard proved this to a doubting Thomas recently while filming his latest picture, "Western Courage" showing Friday and Saturday at the Avon Theatre.

Ken allowed a cowboy to try and lasso him from a distance of fifteen feet, using any length of rope the cow-puncher desired. Dozens of times the cow-boy thought he had Maynard caught in his rope, but Ken always managed to free himself from the coils by nimbly stepping but a fraction of an inch either one way or the other.

"There is just as much an art in learning to dodge the encircling coils of a lasso as learning to use the rope", the western star told the cow-boy after the demonstration was concluded.
